

STIRLING GOLF CLUB

BOTHWELL'S RESTAURANT

MENU

Patrick Hepburn, first Earl of Bothwell, supported James IV in usurping his father James III. He and the King were lifelong friends and they were regular golfing partners. In 1506 he participated in the second oldest recorded golf match against James in The Kings Park, Stirling. Thus Stirling has a legitimate claim along with St. Andrews, Perth and Musselburgh to be the oldest location for golf in Scotland.

Arguably, apart from the King he was the most prominent member of the Royal Court. At various times he held the positions of Lord High Admiral of Scotland, Custodian of Edinburgh Castle, Captain of Dumbarton Castle, Sheriff Principal of Edinburgh and Haddington and Master of the King's Household. The King's trust in him is evidenced in his diplomatic appointment to renew the Auld Alliance with France and his being given the role of concluding the Treaty of Marriage between the King and Margaret Tudor (the sister of Henry VIII).

He stood proxy for King James at the ceremony of betrothal for this marriage. Some years later his great grandson, James Hepburn, also the Earl of Bothwell, was a supporter and husband of Mary Queen of Scots (another reputedly avid golfer who no doubt also played at the King's Park during her many stays at Stirling Castle).
